SUMMER AT THE THEATRE. SOME SURVIVALS IN SERIOUS DRAMA

ON OUR STAGE IN JUNE. Hal Reid and Bertha Belle Westbrook's New Religious Play, "The Prince of the World" Reproductions for the Week of "Rose dale" and "Lost, Strayed or Stolen." During the prologue of "The Prince of the World" at the Murray Hill Theatre, yesterday afternoon, the audiences behaved as though it both hoped and feared that Christ was about to be impersonated. The advertisements had said that this was "a Christian play," and the action began with what seemed like preparations for the trial of the Saviour before Pontius Pilate. Although the scene was in the house of High Priest Caiphas, it was not long before Governor Pilate seated himself with an official air in a chair of state. and listened to accounts of the doctrines and miracles of the founder of the new religion. Some of the language had been derived from the Bible, some from tradition and some from the imagination of Hal Reid and Bertha Belle Westbrook, the authors of the drama. Barabbas, the thief, introduced himself as a convert. Simeon, the leper, told of his faith based on a cure. Herodias, mistress to King Herod, denounced the Messiah, Judas Iscariot betrayed him. Peter denied Him. and soldiers were sent to arrest Him. By this time the expectation that He would be represented was general. There were signs of concern, and several women went out of the theatre. But at the point where the introduction would have been made, if at all, Pilate quitted his chair and ordered it conveyed to the place where the prisoner was to be arraigned. A cross was brought in, and Barabbas bore it away in the procession of Christ's followers and antagonists. That was the climax of the prologue.

The rest of the play was dated seventeen years later, and, like most Christian fiction for the stage, it made a Roman Emperor fix his hateful eyes on a Christian maiden, tempt her with offers of luxury, and, when she repulsed him, consign her to an awful death. Several of her relatives shared her imprisonment and peril. The lustful Casar was the usual drunken flend. All this was conventional, yet neither ridiculous nor agitating. The diction was grandiloquent, and abounded in Scriptural quotations. The actors seemed to have been chosen for strong voices and tall figures. The only one of them who suffered any lapse of portential mien was Mr. Reid, the author, whose performance of the tyrant suffered from a bad memory. His collaborator, Miss Westbrook, was ready, willing and able to give an excellent portrayal of the imperilled maiden. It was she, too, who figured in one scene that developed popular value. That was before she was rescued and her captor dethroned by Gauis led by her heroic lover, and at the earlier juncture when she was sentenced to be devoured by a lion. A curtain in Cæsar's audience chamber was drawn aside, and a cage disclosed with a big lion in it. He was a fine old beast, and he played his rôle well by pacing to and fro with a demeanor that served well enough for suppressed fury. A trap door in the top of the cage was opened and Miss Westbrook was dropped in. The spectators shivered. But it had been set down in the play that, by a miracle, the savage brute ahould become docile and lie down at her feet And the lion did it all right, thus making a climax that was applauded immensely. to have been chosen for strong voices and godfather is lost in each of these recountries and in a third. When the baby is finally found a poor relation, who has felt slighted throughout, has to be accepted for the honored duty.

Mr. Goodwin's verses, sometimes good and sometimes bad, are at their best in this play. The linai of the first act is admirable. The loss of the baby is discovered and the entire christening party is steeped in grief. But the father fears that in his wife's weak condition the news might be fatal to her, so he begs them to be merry so she can hear them from the next room. Thereupon they sing cheerful songs to an imaginary baby, while tears stream down their cheeks. The Proctor company does not appear as advantageously in musical pieces as in plain farce, and a piano makes a sad lack of accompaniment. The bill at the Fifth Avenue contains much good vaudeville for the intermissions of "Lost, Strayed or Stolen." The interesting but depressing one-act drama of "The Violin Maker of Cremona" makes a strong contrast to the musical farce. The French poetic theme and expression of Francis Coupée have been finely transferred to English by Jerome K. Jerome, and it is a bit of dramatic literature worth seeing.

Serious drama is with us yet, although we are in June. The week's reproduction by the Green wall stock company at the American last night was "Rosedale" of Wallackian memory, and still retaining value as a piece of military and gypsy romance imbued with good humor. Ralph Stuart's versatile ability was devoted to the Wallack role, and the representation as a whole demonstrated the ready resources of this theatre. Silver King" was brought to the Grand Opera House by Carl Haswin, who has for several years played its hero at the head of a trayg company.
ong the plays that have held over from

Among the plays that have held over from spring into summer the only dignified one is "When Knighthood Was in Flower" at the Criterion, and even in that exception there is an abundance of humor, of which Julia Marlowe makes the most she can. The fun is above the sentiment with Ethel Barrymore in "Capt. Jinks of the Horse Marines" at the Garrick, and there are lew sober minutes in "On the Quiet" at the Madison Square or "Florodora" at the Casino, while "The Brixton Burglary" at the Heraid Square and "The King's Carnival" are laughable altogether. "El Capitan" passed into a second week at Terrace Garden.

Alvin E. Crocker of 228 East Eighty-second street, whose brother, Benjamin R. Crocker of Sacramento, Cal., left a large estate in which Alvin shares, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday as a poor person, with liabilities $33,783 and nominal assets $33,648. It is stated that the effect of the petition is to sullify an assignment to his son. Oliver P. Crocker of Atlanta, of his interest of $47,-198 in Benjamin's estate. The petitioner explains that this estate is about to be distributed and that on Feb. 6 he assigned his interest to his son to hold to settle certain debts and for the protection of the petitioner; that he delivered to his son all his books, papers and vouchers, and that the son now refuses to let him see them, has refused to carry out the agreement, has recorded the assignment, and claims the interest in Benjamin's estate. The assignment, the petitioner says, was without consideration and

KALTENBORN CONCERTS. The Series Is Meeting With Success Again This Season.

The Kaltenborn concerts at the St. Nicholas Garden have become a permanent feature of summer life in New York, and during the two to have acquired popularity that is likely to endured judging by the audiences that have attended the three concerts of the current series. They have been large and heartily appreciative, although the state of the weather has not always been favorable to the enjoyment of any amusement characteristically of the summer. Mr. Kaltenborn has succeeded in making good music popular in the summer months here when some of his more distinguished predecessors have failed in their attempts at the same good purpose. His concerts entertain in artistic fashion many New Yorkers who would be compelled to do without the enjoyment of music were it not for this enterprise and it deserves all the success that has come to it. Sometimes fulfilment falls undeniably below the standard of intent, but the orchestra is usually fitted for its task.

The personnel of the players is somewhat changed since last summer and one sees in place of the younger men heard before some of the more experienced if less enthusiastic Philharmonic fathers. They have not yet impressed themselves noticeably on the character of the playing, which under Mr. Kaltenborn's direction is always enjoyable. Last night the "request' programme included numbers by Sullivan, Verdi, Strauss, Rubinstein and Wagner. At the first symphony concert to-night Tschaikowski's "Pathetique" will be played. # LEHR-DAHLGREN WEDDING

THE YOUNG BALTIMOREAN MARRIED IN ST. PATRICE'S CATHEDRAL.

Detachment of Police and Detectives There to See That No Harm Befell Any Member of the Bridal Party-Ceremony Gone Through Without Interruption.

Mrs. Elizabeth Drexel Dahlgren, widow of John Vinton Dahlgren and daughter of the late Joseph Drexel, was married yesterday to Henry Symes Lehr of Baltimore. The ceremony took place in St. Patrick's Cathedral. There was quite a crowd about the cathedral, attracted, no doubt, by the report that the bridegroom had received a threatening letter. Capt. Lantry had ten policemen at the entrances to the church and inside there were five policemen in plain clothes and four detectives sent there to see that no harm befell any member of the bridal party. Their services were not required, however, and there was no interruption of the ceremony whatever. Capt. Lantry said afterward that the police had received no official intimation that any one contemplated an attempt on Mr. Lehr's life, but that the policemen had been sent to the cathedral merely as a precaution.

The chancel was banked with tall palme, and below these were pale blue hydrangeas through which spring blossoms were thrust, and on the altar there were clusters of Easter lilies. Archbishop Corrigan performed the ceremony at noon, assisted by a number of priests. The bride entered with and was given away by her cousin, George W. Childs Drexel. She wore a costume of white Irish lace. It was made with an Eton jacket over white peau de soie, and with a crush collar of light blue velvet. The big hat was of pale blue velvet, with one big encircling plume. The bride carried a white prayer book. Her ornaments were a string of turquoises. Some of the friends of the bridegroom present called attention to the fact that he had designed the gown. The bride was unattended.

Ex-Assemblyman's Theatrical Venture Come to an Inglerious End.

The Brennan Stock Company, which filled an engagement last week at the Amphion Theatre in Williamsburg with "The Hunchback," did not continue its season at popular prices yesterday, as posters scattered all over Brooklyn announced it would. The company was recently organized by Former Assemblyman Edward C. Brennan of Brook lyn. It was said that he had the backing of wealthy woman of East New York, who put $900 into the venture. Brennan let it be understood that he would make his debut as an actor, but afterward postponed his appearance.

Business was not very good, and though some members of the company received some pay others did not. On last Saturday night Brennan sent word to the unpaid ones that if they would call at the stage entrance at noon Sunday all claims would be settled.

COLORED PASTOR RESIGNS. Rummage Sale Leads to Trouble in Bethany Baptist Congregation.

The Rev. R. I. Gaines has tendered his resignation as paster of the Bethany Colored Baptist Church at Vanderbilt and Atlantic avenues, Brooklyn, which he organized fourteen years ago with twelve members and fourteen years ago with twelve members and which now has a membership of 300. There was a rumpus recently in the congregation over the failure of a rummage sale which the wife of the pastor had gotten up for the benefit of the church. Some of the members withdrew their support from the enterprise at the critical moment and the Rev. Mr. Gaines took occasion to reprimand them publicly for their treatment to his wife. This caused much friction in the church and incidentally, it is thought, caused the pastor's resignation.

The Rev. Mr. Gaines has promised to remain in charge of the church until his successor is chosen. It is expected, however that there will be a satisfactory adjustment of the troubles and that he will be urged to withdraw his resignation. The church is said to be considerably in his debt.

EDDIE BRENNAN'S ACTORS SEER HIM. NAVAL WAR COLLEGE OPEN:

ASSISTANT SECRETARY HACKETT TELLS OF ITS SCOPE. Here Campaigns Are Mapped and Strategy

Studied - Cheers for Rear Admiral Sampson -Guests Inspect the College - Addresses and War Games to Fill Up the Week NEWPORT R. I. June 3.-The Naval War College was formally opened to-day for the session of 1901, the opening address being made by the Hon. Frank W. Hackett, Assistant Secretary of the Navy. The occasion was made more of than in years past and Capt. Hunker of the training station ma-terially assisted at the ceremonies. He had paraded on the wharf the Marine Band and a battalion of naval apprentices, which presented arms as the Secretary and his party landed from the Dolphin. The Secretary was met by Capt. French E. Chadwick, the President of the college. The opening exercises were held in the east lecture room of the college, which was filled with members of the class, naval officers. distinguished visitors and many of the cottagers, including several ladies. Among those present were Rear Admiral William T. Sampson, Congressman Bull, Judge Book-staver of New York, Col. Addison Thomas and Mayor F. P. Garrettson.

The exercises were opened by Capt. Chadwick, who welcomed to the college the Assistant Secretary, the commander of the North Atlantic Squadron and the distinguished chief of the squadron at Santiago. At the mention of the name of Admiral Sampson there was prolonged applause, which was repeated later when in his address the Assistant Secretary referred to that officer.

Mr. Hackett was then introduced and read his address, in part as follows:

"Seventeen years have passed since the first steps were taken to bring into being an nstitution that should provide for the 'higher education' of officers of the navy. During its early struggle for existence, the Naval War College met and dissipated that cloud of prejudices which is almost sure to envelop a project in its nature novel and experimental. The college has survived for the reason that faith has been kept with the promises of those who stood as its spon-

"You assemble here that you may engage in the task of educating yourselves, for this is a college without professor or text book. All are students. You are to learn something of naval tactics and naval strategy will listen to lectures upon naval history, upon international law and like topics; some of you will prepare and read papers dealing with naval campaigns; you will point out and discuss the causes of success or failure attending naval operations, of our own and attending naval operations, of our own and other Powers.

"But the unique feature of the course is what is known as 'the war game.' Here one finds out empirically into what sort of a situation he is likely to be precipitated in the event that war shall suddenly come upon us. It sets a man to thinking what he had better do about it. When an officer goes away at the end of a course he carries with him a new stock of ideas. Later, upon taking command of a ship, there would seem to be no reason why he may not improve the opportunity to impart some of these ideas to junior officers. In this way the influence of the Naval War College may be exerted in numerous directions.

junior officers. In this way the inhierce of the Naval War College may be exerted in numerous directions.

"The sinking of Cervera's fleet was not the execution of a plan suddenly inspired. On the contrary, that memorable July forenoon saw wrought out that which in its beginnings, at least, was rehearsed, so to speak, in these very halls. An incident that occurred not long after the close of the war serves to illustrate my meaning. Rear Admiral Sampson, happening to be here, saw suspended on the wall a large chart of the Cuban coast. It bore certain marks that denoted the movements of war vessels. The Admiral took it to be a chart that had recently been prepared for the purpose of illustrating certain features of the Spanish war. It turned out, as a matter of fact, that he was looking at a working model that had been put to use two years before the war in the study of an imaginary campaign against Spain.

"So too, the contingency of scouting in the West Indian waters during supposed hostilities with Spain had not been neglected. For the purpose two rooms were occupied, as effects the acceptance of the search room returnshilled as contingent in each room returnshilled as contined the search room returnshilled as contined to the search room returnshilled a contined to the search hostilities with Spain had not been neglected. For the purpose two rooms were occupied, an officer in each room represented a contending force. Each started with a like knowledge of the number, character and the assumed disposition of the ships of the other. Each did the best he could to fix the whereabouts of his opponent. On a signal work was stopped and the officers prepared results. It is told of one accomplished commander whose ship did invaluable service as a scont on the Cuban coast, that while thus engaged he found the work strangely familiar, and said of it, 'Why, it seems as though I am sure later on to hear Taylor's bell.'

thus engaged he found the work strangery familiar, and said of it. Why, it seems as though I am sure later on to hear Taylor's bell.

"Another illustration of the benefits of the instruction here will. I think, interest you. You will recall the fact that during the Spanish war Rear Admirul Remey served on board the Lancaster, a station ship at Key West. The Admiral was the centre of communication between the Navy Department and our fleet in the West Indies. How well he performed that duty you need not be told. An officer of Admiral Remey's staff is quoted as having said of the work in the Admiral's office, that it was exactly like the work during one of the War College war games, and that no study could have better fitted one for the real thing. "The United States in enlarging its borders and taking to itself foreign possessions has indeed assumed a grave responsibility. To the navy is largely due their acquisition. Upon the people of these distant islands we are conferring the blessings of good government. For their protection and welfare we shall continue to look, in a large measure, to the navy. Nor shall we be disappointed."

At the close of the address the college was inspected by the guests present and an informal reception held in honor of the Assistant Secretary. Following this Capt. and Mrs Chadwick entertained at luncheon. Mr Hackett left for Washington on an afternoon train and the Dolphin salled for New York in the afternoon.

To-morrow Capt Chadwick will give an explanation of the course, which will be followed by an explanation of the war games by Lieutenant-Commander Rush. This week will be devoted to committee work and war games and two lectures on "Strategy" by Capt. Mahan, which will be read by a member of the staff.

The staff of the college this summer is as follows: Capt. F. E. Chadwick, President; Commander J. B. Murdock, Lieutenant-Commander J. B.

WAR PLAY BY THE NAVY. Two War College Problems to Be Carried Out by the North Atlantic Squadron.

WASHINGTON, June 3 -Two interesting features of the work of the Naval War College at Newport, which entered on its summer course in sea problems to-day, will be carried out in a practical way in conjunction with the North Atlantic Squadron. These features are new and of considerable importance to the navy. One is the establishment of a temporary war base of supplies on some island in the vicinity of Newbort, probably Martha's Vineyard or Nantucket. The ships will take possession of the island and proceed to land marines, seamen, guns, ammunition and stores, and erect the necessary fortifications as well as mine the adjacent harbor. The effort of the squadron's officers and men will be toward doing this work in the quickest possible time. The other feature is more interesting. It all of them the newest and best patterns of 1901.

If there is a poor pair in the whole lot it's our fault and we'll make it right.

50c. and 75c, is the usual price.

35c, a pair, or three pairs for $1 to-day's price.

What sort of summer sack suit did you say? Every sort here.

Panamas have "caught on."

Have you?

Possible time
The other feature is more interesting. It contemplates a chase of one squadron by another and stronger division of ships and the entrance of the first into an unprotected har bor, which the smaller squadron must put in a state of defence before its pursuers arrive. This calls for the protection of the harbor by pertable explosive mines, which the ships of these quadron seeking refuge must drop while they are under way. The idea is to so dispose of these nunes that the pursuing ships will encounter them, which in actual warfare would mean the destruction of the vessels. In this war play dummy mines will be used and any pursuing vessel encountering one of them must confess the fact and consider itself put out of action. This week's programme at the War College will consist of an explanation of the war games by Lieutenant-Commander Rush, reports from committees on war games and tactical studies, an explanation of the problems under consideration, and a lecture on "Strategy," by Capt. Mahan

BEAUTIFUL SKIN

Soft White Hands Luxuriant Hair Produced by CUTICURA SOAP

MILLIONS OF WOMEN USE CUTICURA SOAP, assisted by CUTICURA CINTMENT, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening and soothing red, rough and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and chafings, or too free or offensive perspira-tion, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated scap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath and nursery. Thus it combines, in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap and the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world. antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and

Bergen County Alarmed Because Doctors Disagree and Patients Are Not Isolated. PATERSON, N. J., June 3 -The physicians have fallen out over the diagnosis of a disease which is epidemic in this section. The Roard of Health in this city and many leading physicians have declared it to be smallpox. though a mild form. Dr. Zabriskie of Suffern and most of the physicians between Ridgewood and Suffern, N Y, following Dr Za-briskie's opinion, have declared that it is Cuban itch, a disease brought from Cuba by the soldiers and said to be less dangerous by the soldiers and said to be less dangerous than chickenpox.

There are over one hundred cases of the disease between Ridgewood and Suffern. As the authorities in that section have taken no precautions to have persons coming in contact with the contagion vaccinated or isolated, not even isolating the persons who are down with the disease, the authorities here have become alarmed James P. McNair. Secretary of the Board of Health here, notified the State Board of Health to-day of the circumstances and asked that something be done to protect the people of this city. As part of the territory lies in New York State the State Board of Health of New York will also be notified. This no doubt will result in an investigation and decide the question.
